Turbulence in the Insurance World

The property insurance market in California is currently quite challenging. The insurance companies are making it increasingly difficult for individuals and businesses to secure the proper coverage they need. These challenges stem from a combination of factors including rising construction costs, a surge in natural disasters, and regulatory failures.

The consequences of these challenges are evident as major insurance companies are pulling out of the state, limiting their coverage, or going out of business entirely. Furthermore, they are installing moratoriums on property insurance statewide while raising rates to catch up with inflation and the rising cost of claims.
